#TIBET MATTERS

@SikyongPTsering:

As in the Tibetan saying, big insects eat small ones. Invasion of Ukraine reminds us of the invasion of Tibet in 1950. Resorting to violence is inhumane and is anachronistic in today's world. Peace should be restored in Ukraine.

@pema0_o:

Seven decades ago when CCP forces entered Tibet, my grandfather was a regular 19-year-old. Not a soldier. But still he sacrificed everything to protect our homeland. Tonight, thousands in Ukraine are forced to make the same sacrifice. Om mani Padme hum.

@freetibetorg:

MP for Stockport @NavPMishra in Parliament yesterday urging the government to address the ongoing human rights abuses in Tibet with their Chinese counterparts.

@lvcatablecc:

When people with conscience all over the world are praying for the people of Ukraine, Chinese are mocking, discriminating against Ukrainian women! Say "I am willing to accept beautiful Ukrainian women between ages 10~26 to take refuge in my home". What a cold-blooded nation!

TIBET WATCH

<https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=0k96xnOzjqE>

The History of Tibet is a fascinating one. The Tibetan Empire was founded in the early medieval era, and quickly rose to become a pan-Asian Empire that engaged extensively with the Indian subcontinent, controlled valuable overland Silk Road routes, and contended with China.

DID YOU KNOW?

China continues to insist that Tibetans are happy and prosperous, but won't allow journalists, tourists or diplomats to see for themselves. Tibetans are denied fundamental rights, but the authorities are especially rigorous in suppressing any signs of dissent among Tibetans, including manifestations of Tibetan religious beliefs and cultural identity.
